

Veterinary Medicine

The mission of the Midwestern University College of Veterinary Medicine (CVM) is to improve animal and human life through innovative veterinary education, state-of-the-art healthcare services, and scholarly work relevant to the concept of One Health.

- CVM is a full-time, four-year program that awards graduates the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (D.V.M.) degree
- CVM students spend their pre-clinical training years in classroom lectures, laboratories, and simulation lab exercises
- Hands-on live animal contact and clinical skills training begin in the first year and continue throughout the four-year program
- During clinical training, students rotate through a variety of diverse veterinary care experiences, both on campus and at external sites
- Campus buildings, including Cactus Wren Hall, the Companion Animal Clinic, the Large Animal Clinic, and the Diagnostic Pathology Center, are designed specifically for CVM students and offer state-of-the-art training
